SACRAMENTO- California Health and Human Services Secretary Diana Dooley today named David G. Maxwell-Jolly, Ph.D., to serve as Undersecretary of the California Health and Human Services Agency.

Dooley also named Toby Douglas to serve as Director of the California Department of Health Care Services, and announced that Terri Delgadillo will continue to serve as Director of Developmental Services.

"David's experience and extensive knowledge of health care and public policy will be a great asset to the Agency in the months and years ahead," Dooley said. "I am pleased he will join our team at the Agency as we work to advance Governor Brown's agenda for health and human services and navigate challenging fiscal times in the months ahead."

Maxwell-Jolly, 61, has served as Director of the Department of Health Care Services since 2009, and was Director of the Department of Child Support Services from 2007-2009. Previously, he was a Deputy Secretary at the Health and Human Services Agency (1999-2002). From 1986 to 1999, Maxwell-Jolly was a principal consultant in the California State Senate, and supervising analyst for the California Legislative Analyst's Office from 1982 to 1986.

"I'm excited to have the opportunity to help review and reform the ways we provide the vital services that are the mission of this Agency," Maxwell-Jolly said. "I look forward to working with Governor Brown and Secretary Dooley to improve our state's health and human services system."

Toby Douglas, Chief Deputy Director of the Department of Health Care Services, will become Director of the Department, which administers the state's Medi-Cal program and other related health services programs.

"Toby's leadership and experience are perfectly suited for this position and I am confident he will help to build a better health care system for all Californians," Dooley said.

Douglas, 38, has been chief deputy director since 2009, and held leadership positions in the Department since 2005. From 2001 to 2005, Douglas was a senior manager of activities related to health access, policy and planning at the San Mateo County Health Department.

"I am honored by this appointment and welcome the opportunity to serve in the Brown Administration and work to improve the health status of all Californians," Douglas said.

Terri Delgadillo, 52, Director of the California Department of Developmental Services since 2006, will continue in that role, Dooley said.

"I have great confidence in Terri's leadership skills and her ability to continue in her role," Dooley said. "I welcome her to the Brown Administration and know her skills in working with the developmental disabilities community will be extremely valuable."

Prior to being appointed to lead the Department, Delgadillo served as Deputy Secretary at the California Health and Human Services Agency. She previously served as Deputy Director for the Department of Health Services, and Acting Undersecretary and Deputy Secretary for the Youth and Adult Correctional Agency.

The California Health and Human Services (CHHS) Agency oversees twelve departments and one board that provide a range of health care services, social services, mental health, alcohol and drug treatment, income assistance and public health services to the people of California.
